Building a Love for Literacy

Reading together is one of the earliest shared experiences between adult and child. The desire to be read to starts with the early enjoyment of being held close and cuddled as a story is read. Infants are not born book lovers; they are born learners and will respond positively to the one-on-one time spent with you as you read. It is best to select sturdy board books with high contrast images of familiar foods, animals, household items or people (especially babies). Use the text as a springboard for your own stories, commenting on colors or familiar objects. Young children are soothed by the sound of your voice and the warmth of your body and will come to think of reading together as a pleasurable activity.
